The topic of the session covered how to obtain assistance from any incubator or accelerator for turning an innovative concept into a start-up. The speaker discussed the many phases of a start-up business, including idea, prototype, proof of concept, and market-ready. He noted that in a start-up company's growth process, both incubators and accelerators are crucial. By giving them access to office space, coaching, and partner possibilities, incubators support and guide start-up businesses as they develop their concepts. Describing the methods or practical procedures for becoming exposed to helpful resources or links. This workshop's goal was to help the students realize how crucial incubation is to helping start-ups. The session was attended by about 57 students. The speaker handled the student's questions expertly, and the session was quite educational.
